TRANSPORT & LOGISTICS

Where civilization starts, so does trade. With the African continent being mankind's birthplace, it was in Africa that trade originated. The African continent has come a long way from the initial, primitive barter system to today's dynamic online and offline commerce. As a result, Africa's transport & logistics market has been growing exponentially, further driven by internal trade and overseas competition. Nevertheless, due to the challenges in infrastructure, great distances between villages and cities, and the political risks in some countries, the industry's future in Africa remains uncertain.
